

Anthropology of the Middle East

Call for Papers: Middle East in Turmoil

Volume 19, Issue 2 (Winter 2024)

Anthropology of the Middle East has considered it necessary under circumstances that we are facing daily, to dedicate an issue to papers or essays which are considering events of 2023. We are sitting in our safe abodes, but we are watching, reading, rereading, discussing what is happening, which has its history, and will have its effects on the region's life. As specialists of everyday life, we welcome articles which discuss any and all aspects of life in the area in view of the events from the 7th of October which as anthropologists we are experiencing. Articles could consider language, archaeology, cultural issues, politics, economics, social, media and naturally religious and war issues, not to mention human rights. So, we have to have a reflection of our Middle Eastern experience wherever we live, and those of anthropologists of the Middle East in face of these events, reflected in AME.

Submission

Papers/Essays should be submitted to soheilairan@gmail.com or the.fakhrih@gmail.com for consideration.

Deadline for submitting articles: 15 February 2024

More information on submission guidelines, including the style guide, can be found at www.berghahnjournals.com/ame.

As part of the Berghahn Open Anthro pilot, articles in Anthropology of the Middle East are published Open Access without APCs. To learn about Open Access, please see berghahnjournals.com/boa-author-faq.